A community-based participatory planning approach for building safer neighbourhoods

- It differs from traditional models of policing in Lisbon in that it is jointly planned and operated by a partnership established between the Lisbon Municipal Police, local partners and residents.
- Preventive, proactive and participative policing model.
- All members of the partnership recognise the importance of cooperation between the Police and the community in improving both actual security and citizens' feelings of security.

Participatory planning

Foot patrolling by the Community Policing Team

- Listening to the needs communicated by the population

Monthly meetings with the partners of the security group

Identification of public space problems

- Sidewalks maintenance
- Litter in the street
- Lack of street lightning
- Vegetation hiding road signs
- Abandoned vehicles
- Nuisance

Preventive awareness activities planned with local partners on crime prevention and safety recommendations

3. Results & challenges

3. The results so far & challenges for the future

Research undertaken in the scope of CCI – Cutting Crime Impact Project (H2020):

Main results:

- Increased sense of 'ownership' by the community and support of community policing by raising awareness of the unique role of community policing officers in the community;
- The need to encourage senior police officers to value, support and engage with community policing over the longer term in order to not being diverted onto other policing tasks;
- Just as community involvement there is a need to engage key decision-makers (senior police officers) in the delivery of the Lisbon community policing model.

3. The results so far & challenges for the future

External evaluation of the CP model in Lisbon

Framework:

- Cooperation Agreement between CML and University Nova de Lisboa (2020)
- Assessment to analyse the development of Public Policies for crime prevention and policing models in close cooperation with citizens
- Assessment to validate the investment in resources to expand the CP model to other neighbourhoods of the city

3. The results so far & challenges for the future

External evaluation of the CP model in Lisbon

Main results:

- The Community Policing effectively contributes to increase citizens' feelings of security.
- The advantages of each neighborhood always having the same police officers facilitates in-depth knowledge of the social reality of the neighborhoods and their problems.
- The continued presence of dedicated police officers makes it possible to build a relationship of trust between the police and the community and progressively deconstruct the negative image of the police among the population.
- Preventive patrolling and the officers' initiatives facilitate a faster resolution of problems identified by the population.

3. The results so far & challenges for the future

External evaluation of the CP model in Lisbon

Challenges for the future:

- In the planning phase, the diagnosis stage is undervalued, with pressure to bypass this stage, to have the officers in the field as quickly as possible;
- Difficulty in involving and mobilizing some groups of the community in the planning phase;
- Security groups are not representative of the entire community;
- The commitment of the partner entities is very different within the various partnerships and changes over time;
- The difficulty of continued participation by some partners in security groups;
- The trend on reduced police officers (retirement / not attractive profession) and the consequent ageing on policing, namely the impact on foot patrolling.

3. The results so far & challenges for the future

External evaluation of the CP model in Lisbon

Challenges for the future:

■ Investment in multidisciplinary networks involving police forces, academics and partners (citizens representatives and organizations)

is key to:

- ❖ facilitate reflections and promote a broader understanding and knowledge about the macro context in which community policing is operationalized
- ❖ for the development of effective intervention strategies to be applied at community level and within the police organizations.
